Dear Mr. Sessions,

On September 1, 2009, on my return from Alaska, I passed through U.S. Customs alone from Manitoba, Canada, into North Dakota on to I-29 with my passport and all automobile documents. The customs official searched through my ice chest with his bare hands which necessitated my discarding the contents. While I deeply appreciate their responsibilities and their excellent performance, should they not wear sanitary gloves when initiating contact with food and drug items?

Sincerely,

(b) (6), (b) (7)(C)
